June: Strong market growth, and our fiscal year ends on a high note

June was another solid month for Vietnam's stock markets. The VN Index rose 5.2% in USD terms to close at 776, another nine-year high, despite the lack of any significant positive catalysts. Foreigners continued to be net buyers for the sixth consecutive month, maintaining a net-buying position of USD420 million in the first half of the year, as compared to their net-selling position of USD83 million for the same period last year. VOF's share price was up 3.9%, ending the month at USD3.82. The discount between share price and net asset value (NAV) per share was 19.8%.

Some observers highly anticipated the release of the MSCI watch list of countries eligible for upgrade to Emerging Market status, with the expectation that Vietnam's inclusion was imminent. It was not, and we were not surprised: our view has consistently been that an upgrade to EM status may take a few more years. We would prefer the market be driven by strong fundamentals rather than a technical bounce (although said bounce would likely be significant if past upgrades of other countries are any measure).

At 2017's half-way mark, the VN Index has increased just over 17.1% year-to-date. While a similar rise in the second half of the year may be difficult to achieve, we believe the likelihood that the benchmark will be somewhat higher at year-end is a distinct possibility. June also marks the end of the fund's fiscal year, and we are pleased to report that NAV per share increased 26.4%, helped by a strong market (+20.6%) but also the addition of significant alpha from the portfolio. On a like-for-like basis, our capital markets portfolio returned 33.3%, outperforming the market by a wide margin. On a five-year basis, the fund's NAV is up 94.5% while share price is up 158.3%, again far superior to the VN Index, which was up 69.2% during that period.

As we start the new financial year, we continue to strive to achieve similar – or better – results in the year ahead, and are continually evaluating potential opportunities, particularly in the private equity and privately negotiated space. We thank our shareholders for their continued trust and support.

Macroeconomic Update

Vietnam's GDP growth rate accelerated from 5.2% yoy in 1Q17 to 6.2% in 2Q16, leading to a GDP growth of 5.7% yoy for 1H17. The acceleration in GDP growth was driven by improvements in both manufacturing and consumption growth. In Q1, manufacturing growth was impeded by a reported 38% fall in Samsung's production due to issues with the company's Galaxy Note 7 phone, but the launch of the Samsung's new S8 smartphone helped lift Vietnam's manufacturing activity from 8.3% year-on-year (yoy) rate of growth in Q1 to an estimated 12% yoy pace in Q2 (manufacturing activity grew 10.5% yoy in 1H17).

Export growth accelerated from a 5.9% pace in 1H16 to 18.8% yoy growth in 1H17, which was Vietnam's fastest H1 export growth in the last five years, but imports rose 24.1% yoy, degrading Vietnam's trade balance from a circa 1.7% of GDP surplus in 1H16 to a 2.7% of GDP deficit in 1H17. However, the country's import growth was driven by a 37.8% increase in purchases of tools and machinery in the first half of the year – signaling that Vietnam's manufacturing production is likely to continue expanding in 2H17 and 2018.

The other notable improvement from the beginning of the year was an increase in Vietnam's reported real retail sales growth. Vietnam's General Statistics Office (GSO) reported a 6.2% yoy increase in real retail sales in 1Q17, and a 8.4% yoy increase in 1H17, implying an acceleration in real consumption growth in Q2 (the GSO does not report quarterly retail sales growth figures). However, the improvement in the reported real retail sales growth was partly attributable to a drop in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) inflation from 4.7% yoy at the end of 1Q17 to 2.5% at the end of 1H17.

Finally, despite the acceleration in Vietnam's growth from earlier this year, the government's GDP growth target of 6.7% for 2017 now seems challenging. Oil production fell by about 13% in H1, without which Vietnam's GDP would have grown at about a 7% pace in H1. We do not expect this situation to improve in the second half of the year, so we expect GDP to grow by 6.3-6.5% this year. Achieving our forecast would necessitate an increase in Vietnam's GDP growth from 6.7% in 2H16 to above 7% in 2H17, but with the Vietnam's Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) rebounding from a 14-month low of 51.6 in May to 52.5 in June, we are optimistic that our forecast can be reached.
